INTRODUCTION

Norway lies west of Sweden and north of Denmark in Scandinavia in the north of Europe. Large mountains, lakes and fjords dominate the Norwegian landscape. The harsh weather conditions have greatly influenced the way Norway works. From the beginning people settled in small groups separated from each other by significant geographical features. This explains all the different dialects and various accents of the Norwegian language. It is also why there are lots of small, very close-knit communities where everybody knows everybody. Till this day Norway is still a small country in this respect, and when two Norwegians from different parts of the country meet for the first time, they are likely to ask something along the lines of “Oh, you’re from Bergen? Do you know Ole?”.

Norway is one of the richest countries in the world, and at the same time one of the smallest. The population is just about to reach 5 million people. Norway is very independent and likes to control its own affairs, which is why it is still reluctant to join the EU.

Norway, Iceland, Switzerland and Liechtenstein are members of EFTA (the European Free Trade Area) and of the joint EU/EFTA economic area, the European Economic Area. Unlike EU-members UK and Ireland, non-EU-members Norway and Iceland are members of the Schengen visa treaty. This means that Norway receives a lot of the same benefits as the EU countries do, without actually being a part of the EU.

Norwegians are known to be very patriotic and proud of their country. They almost certainly think that Norway carries a bigger importance on the world arena than it actually does.
